This is where you run the app from the default windows calculator application. Let's say you want to run the linux command for swapping some files, you create a java program and give it a name say run. This program runs if you click it from its associated folder. Its name is run.jexe. Copy this file to where the default windows calculator is located. Right click on the windows calculator and choose run with JEXE. This is it, now your java application is running from the windows calculator. As you can see I've two different programs "run.jexe" and "run". If we make an alias for "run" it gets me the JApp. If you want to change the paths, you can make an alias for your app. By using the command: %appdir%/run It will display the path of the java application I'm talking about. Conclusion I'm not using this software so i can't tell you how good it is I like how easy it is to install. I really like how easy it is to run. I would rate it better than all the apps i have tried so far. I like how easy it is to set up and start. I like how the app looks. I like how many different Apps it can work with. I like the learning curve. I like the user interface. I like the options that you can add or remove. I like how it works with downloaded Files. I like the way you can give the things you download a different name. I like how it works with the POP3/IMAP mailbox I use to download Files. I think it would be helpful if you could limit the amount of files being moved, that way if I want to delete files I don't want to move i can just delete them and it wont move them to the trash. Your favorite program App is now giving up. It is available for free and does not requiering any personal information for you to use it. I expect to find the App to be easy to setup and use. Setting Up Setting up can be easy or very hard depending on the program and how much work you want to do to use it. On a custom PC i like how simple it is for you to set it up. On a super
